Outcome:

The honey bees occur all over India. These are social insects and live in large colonies. Since 1928, Union Government Agricultural Department has developed bee-keeping as a cottage industry all over India. It is the agro-industrial small scale management which deals with the bee keeping (Apiary). In recent days, it is widely adapted by large number of people in most o the part of the world. People are earning money by developing their projects in rural areas and also many people acquire self-employment. It is also helpful in increasing the yield of cultivated crops as the bees are the best pollinators. The prime commercial products are the honey and bees wax.

The Khadi and Village Industries Commission (KVIC) promoted the traditional forest beekeeping industry. The people of rural areas trained with modern bee keeping management, methods of collection and processing of honey, pollen, wax and other bee products and their marketing. Now local people and farmers are acquainted with the seasonal management, flow management death management, provision of feeding, and control and cure of bee disorders, bee diseases, pests and enemies of bee colonies according to their environmental conditions and beside these management strategies some special management techniques like queen rearing, migration of honey production or for colony multiplication, to make them in handling bee colonies properly. Now-a-days, apiaries are earning a large part of income from production and supply of package bees, queen bees and nucleus colonies. State governments have come forward to grant subsidiary financial assistance to popularize the apiculture among rural population and it is now a sustainable source of income for the farmers and rural people.

We in our college adopted the topic 'Apiculture' as our Add-on course for students of Non-Science subjects to give them an idea of how it can be used for earning revenue both from honey and other bee products by selling them through cooperatives or in the market. Ours' being a rural college, where most of the students come from families whose main source of income is agriculture, the produce mainly comprising of fruits, mustard,etc, honey bee rearing also increases the yield of such crops as bees are the most important pollinators.

OUTCOME OF THE ADD-ON-COURSE

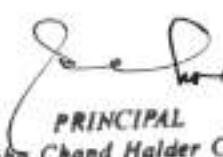

The Department started with 80 students initially, but unfortunately, 10 of the students could not complete the course within the stipulated time, and were not able to take the examination.

The main problem that we encountered was the students' inability to comprehend and understand the subject, in the initial stages. Since they were new to this subject, it was difficult for them to understand the subject. But, as the course proceeded, the situation began to improve and traces of development soon began to be seen in them. Since there were topics like sport journalism and media journalism, they showed their interest and began to cultivate their interest in topical discussions. Students are now able to relate to the emerging trends in the field of journalism. Students are now able to analyze the various aspects of journalism with objectivity. Also they are able to identify, assess, and analyze the ideological issues related to journalism.

Mental health includes our emotional, psychological, and social well-being. It affects how we think, feel, and act as we cope with life. It also helps determine how we handle stress, relate to others, and make choices. Mental health is important at every stage of life, from childhood and adolescence through adulthood and aging.

To accomplish our mission, Mental Health Services has identified the following Student Learning Outcome statements to guide our program services:

Students will maintain and improve their mental health.

Students will demonstrate an understanding of individual mental health conditions, what prevention approaches can be taken and appropriate treatment when needed.

Students will demonstrate personal responsibility by taking actions to improve their mental health, and the health of others.

Students will demonstrate skills in accessing and utilizing healthcare resources on campus and in the community.

Students will demonstrate increased self-awareness, confidence and communication skills.

Student Health Services has a regular cycle of focused assessment linked to each of the Student Learning Outcome (SLO) statements, rotating over a six year time span. The department engages in a variety of student learning assessment activities on an ongoing basis, embedded in our regular operational services. The department has demonstrated a level of proficiency in SLO assessments.

Within the department's SLO assessment plan, the National College Health Assessment is implemented every three years, collecting extensive data on the health status, perceptions and behaviours of SRJC students. This information assists in many ways, including educational and health promotion interventions with students inside and outside the classroom setting. (For more information see Research and Reports)

Other examples of SLO assessment projects include student learning around conditions being addressed in the health centres, such as anxiety and tuberculosis, learning outcomes from classroom presentations on suicide prevention, and learning outcomes via online communications as related to the Affordable Care Act.

The principal aim of the course is to impact knowledge about basic issues involved in mental health. In recent times mental health is a much-discussed issue on media and also in physicians, chambers. As a result of classroom interaction with the students of our college, a confusion regarding the 'issue of counselling and its utility' was noticed and thus to resolve the confusion regarding the current add-on course was conceived.

Student attendance was satisfactory and at the end of course the concerned teachers were satisfied that the current add-on course was useful on throwing some light on the process of mental health. A certificate of completion of the course was also given.
